

I am offended by Sinclair's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election. What a political dirty trick!

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and should be serving the public interest. When this kind of thing happens, this is a good argument against consolidation.

Local media should be locally owned. When large corporations control numerous stations, they can control what is shown to a large segment of our population. This sounds dangerous to me.
